NEW BAUM BOOKS

By L. FRANK BAUM

Author of
"The Wizard of Oz," etc.

Mother Goose in Prose

Beautifully Illustrated by MAXFIELD PARRISH
8vo, cloth, uniform with "The Wizard of Oz," $1.25

Here are the great little people of the great Mother Goose. At last, thanks to the good Mr. Baum, we learn why King Cole had such queer tastes for a monarch, how Humpty Dumpty happened to be on the wall and Jack Horner in the corner, why Bo-Peep's sheep got away from her, etc. Mr. Parrish's magnificent illustrations are a delight to the eye and a spur to the fancy, so quaint, so imaginative, so beautiful are they.

Father Goose: His Book

Illustrated in colors by W. W. DENSLAW and printed on tinted paper
Quarto, cloth, $1.25

All the little folks will hail this book with joy. The gaiety and jollity of Mr. Baum's rhymes and jingles are equaled by the delicious drollery of Mr. Denslow's pictures.

Old Mother Goose became quite new,
And joined a Woman's Club;
She left poor Father Goose at home
To care for Sis and Bub.

They called for stories by the score,
And laughed and cried to hear
All of the queer and merry songs
That in this book appear.

When Mother Goose at last returned
For her there was no use;
The Goslings much preferred to hear
The tales of Father Goose.

Pouring In*

PAM was published February 25th.

Its advent was not made a particular demonstration; the advance sales were fair, but they betokened little.

Two weeks after publication re-orders began flocking in. The public "took hold," and to date this is the result:

Seven Editions Exhausted
Eighth Off Press

"A book that comes mighty near deserving to be catalogued with the great—a story that 'gets under one's skin'—that appeals directly to the heart."—New Orleans Picayune.

"Superlatively clever."—Kansas City Star.

"A captivating story, well-plotted and charmingly written."—Albany Times-Union.

THE MISSOURIAN

By E. P. LYLE, Jr.

A novel will thrive in hot weather as well as in "the book season"—provided it has enough vital essence.

The advance orders exhausted the first 5000 copies of "The Missourian" two weeks before publication, but we have reprinted and can fill your requirements on time if you let us hear from you at once.

For several years we have issued one of our most successful novels in August. Better be prepared.

WALLACE'S RUSSIA

With two colored maps, 672 pp., $5.00 retail.

KELLOGG'S AMERICAN INSECTSBy VERNON L. KELLOGG. (Ready August 1st) With 812 figures and 11 colored plates 647 pp. $5.00 net (postage extra).

This sumptuous volume covers the entire American insect world, including moths, butterflies and beetles, to which separate volumes are often devoted. Written in a style to interest the general reader, the arrangement is systematic and reasoned, and it is probably the most valuable handbook of the subject for the technical student or amateur collector. Habits, life, history, relations to man, to other animals and to plants are given special prominence. It is distinguished by much new matter, the results of the author's ingenious observations, and by many original pictures illustrating species not before figured in general insect books.

NOTES IN SEASON.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just added to their Caxton thin paper series, "The Poems of Gray and Collins." The practical limp leather binding; the thin, but not transparent paper; the clear type and convenient shape of these books, make them particularly attractive. There are many poems of Thomas Gray which are little known but well worth knowing, and many of William Collins's verses that are entirely unknown to the general public, so that this work has all the freshness of a new volume of verse with a few old friends in it here and there, to make the reader feel at home.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish at once a work on the "Government Regulation of Railway Rates," by Professor Hugo Richard Meyer, of the University of Chicago, who points out the respective advantages and disadvantages of the two opposing policies—the foreign policy of equality of charges for equal services, and the American policy of charging what the traffic will bear. Professor Meyer's sources are authoritative, his details are explicit, and his statements are clear and concise. They will also publish this month a compact volume on "Norway and Sweden," by Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, the famous arctic explorer, who has taken an active part in the recent movement in Scandinavia which resulted in the separation of Norway and Sweden. Dr. Nansen's object is to give a concise and authentic account of the circumstances and events which led up to the present crisis. The two final lines of the book are noteworthy: "Any union in which the one people is restrained in exercising its freedom is and will remain a danger." Volume VII. of the edition of "The Prose Works of Jonathan Swift, D.D., edited by Temple Scott, containing the 'Historical and Political Tracts—Irish,'" is just ready. It will be welcome news to the owners of the volumes of this edition to know that of the two volumes that have not yet appeared, Vols. XI. and XII., both are so far under way that their publication may be looked for during the present year.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO. will publish on September 7 an interesting contribution to the literature of the race problem in Charles W. Chesnutt's novel, "The Colonel's Dream," in which is told the story of a man born in the South, who has made a fortune in New York and returns to his old home to live. He speedily finds himself involved in an ever-complicating set of circumstances, owing to the conflict of his feeling for the negroes with that of the community; and this culminates in one final dastardly outrage that convinces him he cannot live in the South. On the same date will be published H. Rider Haggard's new story, "Ayesha," which, the author claims, is not a sequel to "She," but a conclusion to that remarkable novel. Holly, and his ward, Leo Vinceney, are carried through a series of hair-raising adventures in the mountains of Central Asia in quest of the ever-elusive re-incarnated queen. How their route to her was blocked by the jealousy of a rival princess, how they conquered difficulties, natural and supernatural alike, and reached the goal they sought, is described by Mr. Haggard with all of his old-time vigor. They will also bring out in September "The Jewish Spectre," by George H. Warner, a study of the Jew of history and of to-day. The author shows that the rest of the world has built up a wholly imaginary "spectre" which it has labeled the Jew, and which one generation has passed on with additions to the next. What the Jew really was and is, his contribution to civilization, and the larger idea of universal brotherhood which Mr. Warner holds is the basis of true religion—these ideas are advanced with surprising clearness, humor and effectiveness.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not covered by the rules, whether published by members of the American Publishers' Association or not, are preceded by a single asterisk, and the word net follows the price.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail; and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

A story of the occult. An Englishman and his daughter, both deeply interested in Eastern mysticism, are present one night at an incantation in which an Egyptian medium brings to life the spirit of the Englishman's dead wife. The apparition, at once recognizable, quickly changes to a creature of horrible features and the girl realizes that some evil spirit has entered into her. Her father dies from the shock of the apparition and the girl, haunted by this evil spirit, returns to London and soon becomes engaged to a sane, wholesome Englishman. Later she comes under the occult influence of a man whom she and her father had known in Egypt and whose part in her life is only terminated by tragic means.

The thought is from Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus" that individuality and distinction rests in clothes. A great storm is supposed to sweep over present-day political and social London which carries off all clothes, furniture, etc. and thus removes all social distinctions and all recognition of friends and acquaintances. The author is acute and scathing in his remarks on the falseness, superficiality and heartlessness of present day society. A very aristocratic earl and a typical modern woman are chief speakers and point the moral at the end of this dream.

An enthusiastic, poetic young Englishman devoid of all conventionality finds himself in the highly conventional Italy of the eighteenth century. He is Quixotic in his devotion to women and utterly tactless, always putting himself in the wrong and spending his time in regrets and doing penance. Honor, religion and love are his fetishes and the leaden feet of his idols show among the capuchins of the Italian cities and the trading Jews. The language is sometimes rather too unconventional also. To be "naked and not ashamed" is the gist of the author's story of human nature and art.

Swinburne, Algernon C: Love's cross currents: a year's letters. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [Jl.] 8+245 p. D. cl., †$1.50. Theodore Watts-Dunton unearthed this "bantling" of the poet's youth. A prologue gives a short history of three related families. Then the story is told in letters, the most brilliant of which are from an old English matron who keeps her sons, daughters-in-law and grandchildren well in hand. There are many "skeletons" in the closets of these people related by law and some epigrammatic wit about the manners and ways of English society.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JULY 22, 1905.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

TIME WASTED IN SELLING.

It has perhaps rarely occurred to the retail dealer who failed to keep his appointment with a commercial traveller that by his negligence or carelessness he became directly responsible for a certain increase in the cost of the goods he handles. It matters little whether the traveller was disappointed through the carelessness or thoughtlessness of the customer, or because of a good and sufficient reason—the effect upon his business is the same. Every merchant is aware of the fact that the cost of selling goods is included by the manufacturer in the selling price, and that the buyers must pay it.

A good buyer, and by good we mean a businesslike one, never keeps a salesman waiting. These are chiefly the men in the big houses, where the value of time is recognized and every minute is made to count. Unfortunately, these houses are in the minority, and hence, as has been calculated by experts, every salesman on the road loses on an average of two and a half hours each day by being kept waiting, for some reason or other, in most cases, however, without necessity. As there are upwards of 100,000 salesmen on the road the year round, at an average cost of $10 a day for salary, commissions, expenses, etc., the volume of the time lost is at least $250,000 a day, $1,500,000 a week and $75,000,000 a year—a tax of about a dollar a head on the entire population of the United States. In the book business it would add upwards of $100 to the expense of selling every new work as it is brought out. In the stationery lines the figures would be doubled if not trebled. This enormous sum must be and is paid by the buyers and they get absolutely nothing for it. If the lessons taught by these figures teach nothing else, they certainly ought to illustrate the value of another's man's time.

As we have pointed out on several occasions, disappointing a traveller in any way hurts the offender alone. As stated above, he must directly bear his share of the increased cost on his goods made necessary by waste through the loss of time; on the other hand, his discourteous and inconsiderate treatment of the traveller will bring discredit on his business capacity, and through it he will also lose many favors and much information that would help to swell his profit account. No traveller, whether his goods are desired or not, should be considered an intruder. He is an advance agent of commerce, who rubs up against many men in many places, and therefore, if properly treated, can give out—and as a rule he gives it out, willingly and freely—much information that will contribute to the education of the man who is obliged to remain stationary. The old-time peddler was ever a welcome guest at the fireside of his customers; the descendants of many such customers owed their first lift in life to the advance agent of commerce. It were a wise policy, to say the least, for the retailer to extend to the commercial travellers the same courtesy which he expects and gets from them.

IN writing last week of the decisions of Judge Ray we had before us in full only the Scribner decision, the Bobbs-Merrill decision having been at that time but imperfectly reported. The Bobbs-Merrill decision goes somewhat further and states, though as an obiter dictum, that the complainant is seeking to enforce "an unlawful combination agreement." This opinion is based upon the five purposes of the combination as stated by Judge Ray, the first of which is "to fix the retail price of books." Now this first premise is an entirely mistaken one, for, as has again and again been pointed out, the American Publishers' Association does not fix the retail price of any book, but leaves that to be determined absolutely by the copyright owner, who has an undoubted right so to do. The purpose of the combination is "to maintain such retail price" as may be fixed on copyright books, not by the combination but by the individual publisher, and it is the distinction here indicated, in all probability, which makes the legal distinction between a lawful and an unlawful combination. On this point it would seem from previous decisions that the circuit judge is likely to be overruled on appeal. The decision is, however, a most important contribution to the general subject of copyright and contractual relations, and we therefore give it in full in this issue.

DECISION IN THE BOBBS-MERRILL SUIT VS. MACY'S.

WE give in full below the decision of Judge Ray, of the United States Circuit Court, in the suit of the Bobbs-Merrill Company vs. R. H. Macy & Co.:

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

The Bobbs-Merrill Company,
Complainant,
v.
Isidor Straus and Nathan Straus, co-partners under the firm name of R. H. Macy &
Co.,
Defendants.

Suit in equity to enjoin the sale at retail of books containing a copyright novel, "The Castaway," at a price less than one dollar for each copy of the book. Such sales of such book are alleged to be in violation of the terms of a notice printed in each copy thereof upon the page immediately following the title-page and immediately below the statutory copyright notice.

Defendants insist that the books containing such novel having been lawfully printed for sale to the general public and to be read by the general public and put upon the market and sold that the right of the owners of such books to sell same at such price as they, severally, may see fit to ask, cannot be and is not limited or affected by the notice. They also insist that this suit is to enforce an unlawful combination and agreement and press other defenses.

Boardman, Platt & Soley, with W. H. H. Miller, Albert B. Boardman and Henry W. Clark, of Counsel for Complainant.
Spiegelberg & Wise, with John G. Carlisle and Edmond E. Wise, of Counsel for defendants.

RAY, District Judge.

The main facts in this case are not disputed. They may be stated as follows:

The opinion then, as a statement of the facts, copies the two stipulations as to facts at pages 8 and 9, and 62 to 89 of the record, including all exhibits, in full.

From these facts, which are conceded, it appears that the original purpose of the combination and agreement of the association of publishers, including the complainant, was

(1) to maintain the net retail price of all copyrighted books published by the members of such association, or any of them, at such price per book as might be fixed by the publisher of that book, and (2) to prevent the sale at retail of any one or more of such copyrighted books by any dealer in books at retail at a less price per copy than that so fixed. (See finding 10.) Thereupon the persons, firms and corporations in the combination, including the complainant, formed a corporation under the name American Publishers' Association. This corporation included a large majority of all the publishers of all books, both copyrighted and uncopied, in the United States. This corporation immediately on its organization adopted the resolution, Exhibit A, and it and its members entered into an agreement with each other and combined together to do the acts and things and refrain from doing the acts and things mentioned in such resolution, Exhibit A.

That subdivision or paragraph III thereof was illegal and in restraint of interstate commerce is perfectly plain. (See finding 22.) In fact the effect of the decision of the Court of Appeals of the State of New York quoted in the findings (finding 15) is so to declare. By paragraph or subdivision X of such resolution the combination to keep up the price of books and limit and restrain interstate commerce was to be further extended. Thereupon the American Booksellers' Association was formed. (See finding 12.) That the object and purpose as there set forth was illegal cannot be doubted. We now have the combination extended to at least ninety per cent. of the booksellers of the United States and including not only ninety per cent. of all publishers but ninety per cent. of all publishers of books. The combination as existing under those resolutions, etc., is not confined to publishers and sellers of copyright books, but includes the publishers and sellers of all books. The declared object and purpose of this combination is (1) to fix the retail price of books; (2) to maintain such retail price; (3) to refuse to furnish or sell any books to any dealer in books who does not maintain such prices, that is, who sells a book at less than the fixed price; (4) to compel all publishers and dealers in books, in practical effect at least, to come into the combination and enforce and maintain these prices or be blacklisted and driven from the business; (5) to drive out of the business of general publishing and bookselling all who refuse or neglect to maintain these prices. The freedom of the owner of a book, any book, (except those specially excepted,) duly purchased and paid for, to sell the same, soiled or injured or read and no longer desired, was thus attempted to be destroyed. The right of a retail bookseller to sell to the purchaser of fifty books for his library at a less price than to the purchaser of one book must not be exercised under the pain and penalty of having his supply of books cut off and of being driven from the business and financially ruined. (See Exhibit B, finding 12.) As to what was done in restraint of interstate commerce see finding 13.

An attempt was then made by the American Publishers' Association to eliminate the vicious provision of the written agreements and resolutions adopted by the combination by the substitution of article or subdivision III of Exhibit H. (See finding 16.) This must be read with the words included in brackets left out. The American Booksellers' Association followed with the adoption of Exhibit I, or "Reform Resolution No. 2." In finding 17 is set out what was done up to April, 1904. What has been done by the combination since April, 1904, is set out in finding 18. As appears from finding 19 the defendants were put on the so-called cut-off or blacklist in May, 1901, when the unmodified agreement or combination was being enforced. Its offense was in refusing to maintain the retail price of a copyright book however. Defendants' name has not been taken from the list at any time. It is found and conceded that the complainant is living up to and enforcing the agreements, rules and regulations aforesaid, as modified of course, and has published and is publishing all its books, including "The Castaway" because thereof and in accordance and compliance therewith. It follows necessarily from the facts recited from 1 to 23, inclusive, and is found as a further fact, that the notice in "The Castaway" on the page following the fly leaf, viz: "The price of this book at retail is one dollar net. No dealer is licensed to sell it at a less price, and a sale at a less price will be treated as an infringement of the copyright. The Bobbs-Merrill Company" is an act done by the complainant acting in combination with the said American Publishers' Association and the American Booksellers' Association and the members thereof in execution of the said combination and agreement and for the purpose of enforcing same, and because of the said combination and agreement as evidenced by the acts of and the resolutions and rules adopted and made by such associations and agreed to and being executed by the members of said association, including this complainant. It also follows and is found as a fact that such notice was put in such books and that its enforcement as an alleged license agreement is attempted, by means of this action, not because the complainant reserved or intended to reserve to itself any interest in said books containing such printed notices, nor because it merely licensed or intended to license the purchasers thereof who purchased same in the first instance from the complainant, to use or sell such books in a certain way or on certain terms and conditions, or at certain prices, but as an attempt by complainant, as a member of said American Publishers' Association, to enforce as against this defendant the rules of such associations and combination fixing prices, in an effort to maintain them. It is part of a scheme and the right of the complainant to maintain this action depends on the validity of that scheme or combination. Is such notice in such books sufficiently explicit in its terms to constitute a license agreement or contract or any restriction on or modification of the absolute title thereto in the defendant? It does not purport to reserve to the complainant any interest in the book, or any right to control it or the action of its owner in his use and disposition of it except by possible inference.

In Heaton Peninsular Button-Fastener Co. v. Eureka Specialty Co., et al., 77 Fed. Rep. 288, the owner of a patent for fastening buttons to shoes with metallic fasteners made and sold the machines with this notice on a metal plate so conspicuously fastened thereto that all must see it, and so securely fastened as to constitute substantially an integral part of the machine, viz: "Condition of Sale. This machine is sold and purchased to use only with fasteners made by the Peninsular Novelty Company, to whom the title to said machine immediately reverts upon violation of this contract of sale."

Here is a plain unequivocal statement, one that cannot be misconstrued or misunderstood, that there is a condition attached to the sale, viz: that the machine is to be used with fasteners of a certain make only and that a use with other fasteners will be such a violation of the agreement as to defeat the title or right given. This was seen by the purchaser, and he took the machine on that condition and by so doing agreed to the condition and became bound thereby. He became a mere licensee. He acquired the right to use that machine in a certain way only.

In Cortelyou and another and Neostyle Company v. Charles Eneu Johnson & Co., recently decided by this Court, but not yet reported, the patented Rotary Neostyle was sold with this notice on a metal plate firmly and conspicuously attached thereto, viz: "License Agreement. This machine is sold by the Neostyle Company and purchased by the user with the express understanding that it is licensed to be used only with stencil paper and ink (both of which are patented), made by the Neostyle Company, New York City." When the purchaser took this machine he assented to this condition and became bound by it and became a licensee. He is told that he is licensed to use the machine in a certain way and with certain supplies only. Had he been licensed to sell only, that is, made an agent to sell, and empowered to sell at a certain fixed price only it is unquestionably true that had he violated the agreement by selling at a lower or even a higher price he could have been enjoined. Having the sole power to vend his patented articles he would undoubtedly have the right to fix the price at which they should be sold and stop sales made by his agents and licensees in violation of the authority conferred. This is now settled as to a patent right.

In the opinion in that case, pp. 92-93, we find the following:

"The contracts plainly look to the sale, and they also determine the price of the article sold, throughout the United States, as well as to the manufacture in the State of Michigan. As these contracts do, therefore, include interstate commerce within their provisions, we are brought back to the question whether the agreement between these parties with relation to these patented articles is valid within the act of Congress. It is true that it has been held by this court that the act included any restraint of commerce, whether reasonable or unreasonable. United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Association, 166 U. S. 290; United States v. Joint Traffic Association, 171 U. S. 505; Addystone Pipe, etc., Company v. United States, 175 U. S. 211. But that statute clearly does not refer to that kind of a restraint of interstate commerce which may arise from reasonable and legal conditions imposed upon the assignee or licensee of a patent by the owner thereof, restricting the terms upon which the article may be used and the price to be demanded therefor. . . . The provision in regard to the price at which the licensee would sell the article manufactured under the license was also an appropriate and reasonable condition. It tended to keep up the price of the implements manufactured and sold, but that was only recognizing the nature of the property dealt in, and providing for its value so far as possible. This the parties were legally entitled to do. The owner of a patented article can, of course, charge such price as he may choose, and the owner of a patent may assign it or sell the right to manufacture and sell the article patented upon the condition that the assignee shall charge a certain amount for such article."

In Victor Talking Machine, et al., v. The Fair, 123 Fed. Rep., 424, (C. C. A.) the syllabus reads:

"The owner of a patent who manufactures and sells the patented article may reserve to himself, as an ungranted part of his monopoly, the right to fix and control the prices at which jobbers or dealers buying from him may sell to the public, and a dealer who buys from a jobber with knowledge of such reservation, and resells in violation of it, is an infringer of the patent."

And in the opinion, after stating that the grant of a patent by its terms covers three separate or separable fields, the learned Judge giving the opinion says:

"The field of sale is as much within the monopoly as the others, and so it has been decided. Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S. 70, 22 Sup. vt. 747, 46 L. Ed. 1058. And in Edison Phonograph Co. v. Kaufman (C. C.) 105 Fed. 960, and Same v. Pike (C. C.) 116 Fed. 863, the holdings were that a patentee may reserve to himself as an ungranted part of his monopoly of sale the right to fix and control the prices at which jobbers and dealers may sell the patented article to the public, and that whoever without permission enters the reserved portion is an infringer."

In the Victor Talking Machine case, supra, the notice affixed to the machine read: "Notice. This machine, which is registered in our book No. —, is licensed by us for sale and use only when sold to the public at a price not less than $—. No license is granted to use this machine when sold at a less price. . . . A purchase is an acceptance of these conditions. All rights revert to the undersigned in the event of any violation. Victor Talking Machine Co."

In the Edison Phonograph Company cases, cited (see supra) by Judge Baker in the Victor Talking Machine case (supra), there was a restrictive contract and this was referred to in the following language by a notice on the box containing the instrument when sold, viz: "Notice to Dealers: This record is sold subject to restrictions as to the persons to whom and the prices at which it may be sold. Any violation of such restrictions makes the seller or user an infringer of the Edison Patents." A reference to the case in 116 Fed. Rep. 863 will show that the restriction was very clear and explicit. The notice in "The Castaway" does not suggest a restriction upon the title to the book; that the persons or persons taking the book for sale is obtaining anything short of an absolute title and no one would suppose that the publisher of the book would attempt or assume to fix the price at which dealers should sell after obtaining absolute title to the book from such publisher. The words "No dealer is licensed to sell it at a less price" is notice that licensees not absolute owners are so restricted. The words "and a sale at a less price" will be treated as an infringement of the copyright clearly does not even tend to make such a sale by an absolute owner of such books an infringement of the copyright.

It is a close question whether a copyright may be infringed by selling in violation of express and explicit restrictions placed on the dealer, expressly made an agent or licensee only, as to the mode of sale or the price at which same is to be sold.

The Act of March 3, 1891 (26 St. L. 1106), entitled "An act to amend title sixty, chapter three of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to copyrights" amends section 4952 so as to read "The author . . . or proprietor of any book . . . shall, upon complying with the provisions of this chapter have the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing, and vending the same." Section seven of that act amends section 4964 of the Revised Statutes so as to read as follows:

"Every person, who after the recording of the title of any book and the depositing of two copies of such book as provided by this act, shall, contrary to the provisions of this act, within the term limited, and without the consent of the proprietor of the copyright first obtained in writing, signed in the presence of two or more witnesses, print, publish, dramatize, translate, or import, or knowing the same to be so printed, published, dramatized, translated, or imported, shall sell or expose to sale any copy of such book, shall forfeit every copy thereof to such proprietor, and shall also forfeit and pay such damages as may be recovered in a civil action by such proprietor in any court of competent jurisdiction."

This section declares what acts constitute a violation of the copyright of a book. It declares that to constitute a violation of the copyright the offender must have within the term limited, that is, the life of the copyright, and without the consent of the proprietor thereof, first obtained in writing and executed in the presence of two or more witnesses, printed or published or imported, contrary to the provisions of the act, such copyrighted book, or contrary to the provisions of the act within such time and without such consent must have sold or exposed to sale a copy of such copyrighted book known to have been illegally printed. In substance this section declares that it is an infringement of a copyright to print or publish the copyrighted and without the consent of the proprietor given in writing signed in the presence of two witnesses, or to import a copy of such book without such consent, or knowingly to sell or expose for sale a copy or copies of such copyrighted book when unlawfully printed or imported. From this it would appear that an infringement by the sale of a copyrighted book consists in the selling or exposing for sale of a copy of such book that has been unlawfully printed or imported. If this be the law it is not an infringement of a copyright to sell or expose for sale a copy or copies of such book when the same was lawfully printed or lawfully imported. The result would be that it is not an infringement of the copyright of a book to sell a copy or copies thereof lawfully printed, as in this case, in violation of a mere condition imposed upon a dealer by the publisher by which such dealer agrees not to sell below a certain price, the title to the book having been vested in such dealer by the publisher thereof or even in cases where the absolute title had not passed to the dealer. If the publisher of the book being the proprietor of the copyright, parts with the title to such book, either a single or any number of copies, and receives his pay therefor, he has voluntarily parted with all control over that or those particular books. The owner of those books is neither a licensee nor an agent. He has the absolute property therein and the absolute ownership of an article of personal property carries with it the right to give away or sell for such consideration as the owner sees fit to impose, prescribe or demand so long as he violates no law. This view of the copyright laws of the United States, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1891, seems to be taken by Macgillivray in his work on the Law of Copyright, Chap. 4, Sec. 2, page 287. He there says:

"Prohibited Acts and Remedies: It is an infringement, subject to the remedies stated below, to do any of the following acts in respect of a copyrighted work. In the case of: 1, Books; without the consent of the proprietor in writing signed in the presence of two witnesses, 1, to print or publish. 2, To dramatize or translate. 3, To import. 4, Knowingly to sell or expose for sale copies unlawfully made or imported."

We find no suggestion that it is an infringement of the copyright of a book for the owner of the book to sell copies at a price which violates a valid contract between the publisher of the book and the dealer and which was made at the time such dealer became the owner.

In Harrison v. Maynard, Merrill & Co., (C. C. A. 2d Circuit), 26 U. S. App. 99; 61 Fed. Rep. 689, the complainants, publishers of books and the owners of a copyrighted book, sent a quantity of the printed and unbound sheets of such book to the bindery of one Alexander for binding and such sheets were to be stored until complainants should order bound copies. Sometimes they bound copies in advance. A fire occurred in the bindery and both complainants and Alexander supposed the commercial value as books of all such bound or unbound sheets of such book in such bindery was destroyed. On examination complainants' agents so reported. Thereupon, Alexander, without objection from complainant sold the entire debris to one Fitzgerald, who without moving it sold same to some dealers in old paper. Alexander imposed no restriction or condition when he sold. Fitzgerald, who had become the owner of the debris including the printed sheets and bound volumes, put this condition and restriction in the bill of sale: "It is understood that all paper taken out of the building is to be utilized as paper stock, and all books to be sold as paper stock only, and not placed on the market as anything else." Harrison, a dealer in books, visited the place and purchased of these dealers in old paper some of the volumes of the copyrighted book not destroyed and put them on the market. He had no notice of the restriction or condition put in the bill of sale given by Fitzgerald. Complainants, owners of the copyright, brought suit to enjoin such sale by Harrison. On these facts the Court, Wallace, Lacombe and Shipman, held that so long as the owner of a copyright retains the title to the copies of the book which he has the exclusive right to vend by virtue of the copyright, he can impose restrictions upon the manner in which and upon the persons to whom the copies can be sold. They also held that if the agents of the owner of the copyright intrusted with the possession of such books violates his instructions and fraudulently sells to a person who has knowledge of the restrictions, such sale by the agent constitutes a fraud upon the owner of the copyright and that such fraud constitutes an infringement of the copyright with which the owner has never parted, and that such fraud, meaning of course such sales can be restricted by virtue of the statutes applicable thereto. The Court states that this right to enjoy the benefit of the copyright statutes results from the fact that the owner has never parted with the title to the book or the copyright, although he may have parted with the possession of the book. The Court also holds that the right to restrain the sale of a particular copy of the book by virtue of such statutes has gone when the owner of the copyright and of that copy has parted with all his title to it, and has conferred an absolute title to the copy upon a purchaser although with an agreement for a restricted use. If this is true of one particular book it is also true of a large number of copies. The Court also says, in substance, that the new purchaser cannot reprint the copy, but that the copy having been absolutely sold to him the ordinary incidents of ownership in personal property, among which is the right of alienation, attaches to it. The Court further says, "If he has agreed that he will not sell it for certain purposes, or to certain persons, and violates his agreement and sells to an innocent purchaser, he can be punished for a violation of his agreement, but neither is guilty under the copyright statutes of an infringement. If the new purchaser participates in the fraud he may also share in the punishment." The Court cites in support of these statements, Clemens v. Estes, 22 Fed. Rep. 899.

If this be a correct statement of the law, and this Court does not doubt that it is, we recur to the simple proposition whether or not the complainant in the case now under consideration, The Bobbs-Merrill Company, retained any title in the books in question by printing on the page following the title page the statement: "Copyright, 1904. The Bobbs-Merrill Company. May." And thereunder the statement: "The price of this book at retail is one dollar net. No dealer is licensed to sell it at a less price, and a sale at a less price will be treated as an infringement of the copyright. The Bobbs-Merrill Company."

The defendants in this case purchased ninety per cent. of its copies of this book from dealers at wholesale at a reduction of forty per cent. from said mentioned retail price. The other ten per cent. of their copies they purchased at retail paying the full retail price therefor. The defendants knew of the statement printed in said books above quoted, and knew that it was printed in each copy of the book. The wholesale dealers from whom the defendants purchased their copies obtained such copies either from complainants direct or from other wholesale dealers at a discount from the above mentioned retail price. Such wholesale dealers knew that the book was copyrighted and were familiar with the said statement printed in each copy thereof. The books that came to the defendants prior to reaching them did not pass through the hands of any person or persons who were ignorant of the said notice printed therein. It is expressly found, however, and conceded that these wholesale dealers from whom the defendants here obtained their copies were under no agreement or obligation to enforce the observance of the terms of said notice by retail dealers, or to restrict their sales of copies of such book to retail dealers who would agree to observe the said notice.

As has been stated, the notice contains no suggestion that the title of the purchaser to the book is in any way limited. The notice is that the price of the book at retail is one dollar net and if the words "no dealer" are to be construed as referring solely to retail dealers then the notice is that the Bobbs-Merrill Company has not licensed any retail dealer to sell the book at retail for less than one dollar per copy. The fair meaning of this is that in cases where the Bobbs-Merrill Company has granted a license to some retail dealer or dealers to sell the book such licensee or licensees is limited and restricted in his or their authority, but the notice is not a suggestion or an intimation to any person that those who buy and pay for the book in the open market, or even of the Bobbs-

Merrill Company, without entering into an express license agreement different from that suggested by this notice are bound or obligated in any way to demand one dollar per copy for such book. It well may be that the Bobbs-Merrill Company has licensed or will license certain dealers to sell this book, and when it grants a license it has the right to impose conditions on its licensees, but this notice does not state or suggest that every purchaser of one of these books containing this notice becomes a licensee with a limited title, or in fact, no title to the book. A person cannot be both licensee and absolute owner. Again, it is contended that the words "The price of this book" refers to the particular copy containing the notice, and that the words "no dealer is licensed to sell it" refers to the particular copy containing the notice. It is further contended that the Court is bound to give this construction to this language, and that therefore the defendants having knowledge of the notice assented to the proposition and in effect entered into a contract or agreement with the Bobbs-Merrill Company whereby they became its agents to sell the copies at one dollar per volume and no less, or its licensee with power to sell such books for which it had paid the wholesale dealer the price demanded at one dollar per copy only. This Court refuses to give that construction to this notice. This Court declines to hold that the words in such notice "this book" and "it" refer to the particular copy of the book in which the notice is found. The language of the notice is a general statement referring to the book known as "The Castaway" generally and not to any particular copy or copies thereof, and, at best, is but a notice that licensees of the publishers are only at liberty to sell such book at one dollar per copy. The notice forms no part of a contract between the purchaser from the publisher and such publisher, nor does it limit or restrict the title of the purchaser. And this Court will say here that it would be lending itself to the perpetuation of a fraud upon the public should it hold differently. If the Bobbs-Merrill Company in putting its books upon the market, desires to say to wholesalers and to retailers that it is not selling the entire title to the copies put upon the market, let it say so in plain and unambiguous terms. Let it say in its notice that the purchaser of copies of the book from either the publisher or any wholesale or retail dealer is obtaining but a limited or qualified title in the copies purchased, or that in purchasing one or more copies such publisher becomes but a mere licensee of the publisher without title to the copies and with power to dispose of the same only on receiving a specified sum of money. The Circuit Court of Appeals in Harrison v. Maynard, Merrill & Co., supra, also quotes with approval the language of Judge Hammond in Henry Bill Publishing Co. v. Smythe, 27 Fed. Rep. 914-925, viz:

"The owner of the copyright may not be able to transfer the entire property in one of his copies and retain for himself an incidental power to authorize a sale of that copy, or, rather, the power of prohibition in the owner that he shall not sell it, holding that much as a modicum of his former estate, to be protected by the copyright statute; and yet he may be entirely able, so long as he retains the ownership of a particular copy for himself, to find abundant protection under the copyright statute for his then incidental power of controlling the sale. This copyright incident of control over the sale, if I may call it so, as contradistinguished from the power of sale incident to ownership in all property-copyrighted articles, like any other—is a thing that belongs alone to the owner of the copyright itself, and as to him only so long as and to the extent that he owns the particular copies involved. Whenever he parts with that ownership, the ordinary incident of alienation attaches to the particular copy parted with in favor of the transferee, and he cannot be deprived of it. This latter incident supersedes the other—swallows it up, so to speak—and the two cannot coexist in any owner of the copy except he be the owner at the same time of the copyright; and, in the nature of the thing, they cannot be separated so that one may remain in the owner of the copyright as a limitation upon or denial of the other in the owner of the copy."

In Garst v. Hall & Lyon Co., 179 Mass., 588, decided October 17, 1901, without dissent, the Court, speaking of copyrights, said:

"The law of copyright also gives privileges to authors and publishers that do not pertain to property which anybody may make and sell if he can; but even under the law of copyright, when the owner of a copyright and of a particular copy of a book to which it pertains, has parted with all his title to the book, and has conferred an absolute title to it upon a purchaser, he cannot restrict the right of alienation, which is one of the incidents of ownership in personal property. Harrison v. Maynard, 61 Fed. Rep., 689. See also Clemens v. Estes, 22 Fed. Rep., 899; Meyer v. Estes, 164 Mass. 457; Waterman Co. v. Watterman, 27 App. Div. (N. Y.) 133."

The same doctrine is plainly expressed in Keeler v. Standard Folding Bed Company, 157 U. S. 659. In that case it was held that one who purchases patented articles of manufacture from one authorized to sell them at the place where sold becomes possessed of an absolute property in such articles, unrestricted in time or place. In that case the complainants were the assignees for the State of Massachusetts of certain letters patent granted to one Welch. This assignment as matter of course gave to the complainants the rights of the patentee in and for the State of Massachusetts, viz: the sole right to make, use and sell the patented article in that State. The Welch Folding Bed Company owned the patent rights for the State of Michigan, and it of course had the same right to make, use and vend the patented article in that State. The defendants purchased a carload of the patented articles from the Welch Folding Bed Company at Grand Rapids in the State of Michigan. It proposed to sell these articles in the State of Massachusetts, and thereafter did sell some of such articles in the State of Massachusetts, and was engaged in selling the remainder in that State at the city of Boston when the bill of complaint was filed. The Supreme Court held that the defendants having purchased the patented articles in Michigan from the assignee of the patent for the territory included within the boundaries of the State of Michigan had the right to sell them anywhere within the United States, notwithstanding the fact that all the patent rights for the State of Massachusetts had been assigned to another person, to wit, to the complainants. The decision is based upon the propositions that where the patentee not having parted with his rights granted by the patent, makes and vends a patented article, the purchaser can use the article in any part of the United States, and unless restrained by contract with the patentee can sell or dispose of the same in any part of the United States. The Court says: "It has passed outside of the monopoly, and is no longer under the peculiar protection granted to patented rights." The Court approves the language of Mr. Justice Clifford in Goodyear v. Beverly Rubber Co., 1 Clifford, 348-354, wherein he states, in substance, that the patentee having manufactured the article and sold it for a satisfactory compensation, the patentee, so far as that quantity of the product of his invention is concerned, has enjoyed all the rights secured to him by his letters patent, and the manufactured article, and the material of which it is composed, go to the purchaser for a valuable consideration, discharged of all the rights of the patentee previously attached to or impressed upon it by the law under which the patent was granted. The Court further says: "If, as is often the case, the patentee has divided the territory of the United States into twenty or more specified parts, must a person who has bought and paid for the patented article in one part, from a vendor having an exclusive right to make and vend therein, on removing from one part of the country to another, pay to the local assignee for the privilege of using and selling his property, or else be subjected to an action for damages as a wrongdoer? And is there any solid distinction to be made, in such a case, between the right to use and the right to sell?" The Court then cites with approval several cases and especially the language of Mr. Justice Clifford in Mitchell v. Hawley, 16 Wall. 544, 546, 547, as follows:

"Patentees acquire by their letters patent the exclusive right to make and use their patented inventions and to vend to others to be used for the period of time specified in the patent, but when they have made one or more of the things patented, and have vended the same to others to be used, they have parted to that extent with their exclusive patented machine, and consequently a patentee, when he has himself constructed a machine and sold it without conditions, or authorized another to construct, sell, and deliver it, or to construct, use, and operate it, without any conditions, and the consideration has been paid to him for the thing patented, the rule is well established that the patentee must be understood to have parted to that extent with all his exclusive right, and that he ceases to have any interest whatever in the patented machine so sold and delivered or authorized to be constructed and operated. Where such circumstances appear, the owner of the machine, whether he built it or purchased it, if he has also acquired the right to use and operate it during the lifetime of the patent, may continue to use it until it is worn out, in spite of any and every extension subsequently obtained by the patentee or his assigns."

At page 666 the Court calls attention to the case of Wilson v. Rousseau, 4 How., 646, and says that it was there held that "As between the owner of a patent on the one side, and a purchaser of an article made under the patent on the other, the payment of a royalty once, or, what is the same thing, the purchase of the article from one authorized by the patentee to sell it, emancipates such article from any further subjection to the patent throughout the entire life of the patent, even if the latter should be by law subsequently extended beyond the term existing at the time of the sale, and that in respect of the time of enjoyment, by those decisions the right of the purchaser, his assigns or legal representatives, is clearly established to be entirely free from any further claim of the patentee or any assignee."

The Court then says:

"Upon the doctrine of these cases we think it follows that one who buys patented articles of manufacture from one authorized to sell them becomes possessed of an absolute property in such articles, unrestricted in time or place. Whether a patentee may protect himself and his assignees by special contracts brought home to the purchasers is not a question before us, and upon which we express no opinion. It is, however, obvious that such a question would arise as a question of contract, and not as one under the inherent meaning and effect of the patent laws."

In the case now before this Court it appears that the publisher of the book "The Castaway" printed and sold these copies. It put them upon the market. It received its price therefor and reserved no right to demand any further compensation. The defendants purchased in the open market and paid the price demanded. It is conceded that the wholesalers of whom the defendants purchased were under no contract or obligation to impose any condition upon the defendants and they did not. There is no privity of contract between the defendants and the complainants. There is no suggestion in the notice that the retail dealer who buys the copies of the book in the open market enters into any contractual relation with the publishers. It is not stated that the copy of the book is sold on condition that the purchaser will abide by and enforce the price arrangement. The notice is assertive in its terms. It is a dictum. It says that the price of the book at retail is one dollar net. The plain meaning of this language is that if the signer of the notice sells a copy of the book or the book in question containing the notice, at retail the price is one dollar. The notice also asserts that the Bobbs-Merrill Company has not licensed any retail dealer to sell at a less price. It does not say or suggest that the Bobbs-Merrill Company has not sold millions of copies of the book for the trade parting with the title absolutely and unconditionally. This Court is aware that the Keeler case, cited above, is a patent and not a copyright case, but the principle is the same.

In a supplemental brief filed by the counsel for the complainant, he states that he does not consider the notice published in the book as in the nature of a license. He says: "In my opinion, the putting of the book upon the market and selling it by the owner of the copyright constitutes the license; and this notice published in the book is a limitation and qualification of that license. If the book is put out without any notice, the license is unqualified and the sale is absolute; but my contention is that the owner of the copyright has the authority to restrict the license; and, being published in this way, the restriction attaches to the property and is a charge and limitation upon the rights of all parties purchasing the book for resale." This is a claim that the owner of a copyright for a book who prints the book and sells it for a consideration gives to the purchaser a license and does not sell and convey a piece of personal property absolutely. The contention here is that any notice printed in a book and brought to the attention of the purchaser is a restriction of that license to that extent and may be enforced, and that a violation of the obligation imposed by the notice is an infringement of the copyright which may be restrained by the federal courts. This doctrine, it seems to this Court, is contrary to the adjudicated cases. I do not think this contention can be sustained upon principle. Clearly it is opposed to public policy. The purchaser of an article not patented may duplicate it if he can. The purchaser of an article made under a patent right may not duplicate it, but he may use the article purchased and sell the same as his own in any way or for any price he sees fit. The purchaser of a book not copyrighted may duplicate it; make copies or a reprint. The purchaser of a copyrighted book may not make or print or publish a copy, as this would be an infringement of the copyright, but this restriction in no way interferes with the absolute ownership of the particular copy of the book. The owner of an article made under a patent right or of a book printed under a copyright is in no sense a licensee of the patentee or of the owner of the copyright.

"License" with reference to real estate is a permission or authority to do a particular act or a series of acts on the land of another without possessing any estate therein. So with reference to personal property "license" implies and carries the power to do some act upon or in reference to or to do something with the property of another. Herein it differs from an easement. The word easement always implies an interest in the land.

See Words and Phrases, Vol. 5, title "License."

WHAT IS 'THE PRESENT COMBINATION AND ITS OBJECT—OR PURPOSE.

1. The American Publishers' Association has adopted a net price system for all copyrighted books published or controlled by any member or members of the Association and made an agreement to maintain it. By this agreement the members thereof are to cut off all supply of their copyrighted books to any dealer who fails to maintain the net price of such books as fixed by such Association, or what is the same thing, by its members. In short this combination fixes the price of copyrighted books published by its members, and the price at which such books are to be sold, both at wholesale and at retail, and agrees not to furnish or sell any of these books to any dealer who fails to maintain such price, that is, demand and exact from the purchaser the price so fixed.

2. Another Association, the American Booksellers' Association, assents to this, agrees to co-operate and be bound by such system and arrangement, and to aid and assist in carrying it into effect, and to this end agrees not to buy, or keep in stock, or offer for sale the copyrighted book of any publisher who refuses to join the combination and enforce this price system and demand and exact of the customer this price fixed by the combination. Two-thirds of the members of this Association govern. If any member fails to live up to the agreement, etc., he may be expelled and he is not to have books and all members are "restrained" from supplying books, etc. (See Subdivisions 4 and 5 of Exhibit I.) The objects are (1) to compel the would-be owners and readers of copyrighted books to purchase their books of the members of this combination, made up of two combinations embracing at least ninety per cent, of all publishers and dealers in copyrighted books, at an arbitrary price fixed by the combination regardless of the actual value of the book as determined by a demand therefore established in a free and open market or the condition of the books. (2) To compel all publishers of and dealers in copyrighted books to come into the combination, submit to and be controlled by it and sell books at prices fixed by it, regardless of the value of the books, etc., or of the exigencies of the trade and situation of the seller or be deprived of the privilege of purchasing, owning and selling such books. In short such as refuse to come in are to be crippled or perhaps ruined in their business. As the combination extends throughout the United States by the very terms of the agreement interstate commerce is necessarily restrained. A judgment for the complainants in this action will restrain interstate commerce.

If this suit is one to restrain the infringement of a copyright granted to the complainant and now owned by it, by the doing of any act that constitutes infringement of that right, and defendant has infringed, it is entirely immaterial that the combination described exists or that complainant is a member thereof or that its objects are those described.

It is no defense to such a trespass upon the complainants' rights that it has violated and is violating the Sherman anti-trust law, Act of July 2, 1890 (26 St. 209; U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3200), or some statute of the State of New York. In General Electric Co. v. Wise, 119 Fed. Rep., 922-924, this Court so held, citing cases. This Court there said:

"It is difficult to understand how or why a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law by this complainant, if there has been such a violation, confers any right on the defendant to infringe this patent. That act points out the penalties for its violation, and it is not understood that such law denies the grantees of patents the protection of the law because they may be violating some statute. However that may be the evidence falls far short of establishing such a violation by this complainant. The testimony on that subject is squarely contradicted. An individual cannot confiscate the property or property right of a corporation on the ground it has violated that act. Soda Fountain Co. v. Green (C. C.), 69 Fed. 333; Columbia Wire Co. v. Freeman Wire Co. (C. C.) 71 Fed. 302; Bement v. Harrow Co., 186 U. S. 70, 88-91, 22 Sup. Ct. 747, 46 L. Ed. 1058. Harrow Co. v. Quick (C. C.), 67 Fed. 131, cannot be accepted as authority on this question."

See also Strait v. National Harrow Co., 51 Fed. Rep. 819.

But if the complainant has turned over to the combination the fixing of prices and has entered into the combination described and becomes a party to the agreement for the purposes described, and is now, through this suit, attempting as this Court holds it is, to enforce such combination agreement in whole or in part, and such agreement is unlawful because in violation of the act referred to, then this action cannot be maintained. The complainant confessedly is a party to the combination and the agreement and cannot, if it be illegal, have a standing in a court of equity to enforce any part of it directly or indirectly. When a complainant comes into court asking equity it must come with clean hands so far as the transaction involved is concerned. If a party, person or corporation, in attempting to violate the rights of the public and the rights of those persons who will not join in the attempted violation of law, suffers some injury to his property or property rights which are being used by his consent by those who are thus violating the law, in perpetrating such violation, at the hands of one who is lawfully resisting such attempted injury, he or it cannot, while continuing the illegal acts, have an injunction to enjoin the resisting acts resulting in such injury. Each owner of the copyright of a book has a monopoly of that particular book. Copyrights, like patents, are assignable and hence a person or a corporation may lawfully become the owner of any number of copyrights or of all the copyrights of books issued by the United States, and it is immaterial that the purpose is to monopolize the whole business of publishing and selling copyrighted books. In such cases such person or corporation would hold and control all the monopolies for such copyrights of books and he or it could print and sell, or print and not sell, or refuse to print at all, or refuse to allow others to print or publish. Should he or it print or publish one or more copies of these books such person or corporation could appoint agents to sell and prescribe and limit their powers. He or it could license one or more persons to sell and prescribe the terms and conditions of such sale, and limit the price at which same should be sold. Assume that such person or corporation has fixed the price at which such book shall be sold at retail by such agents and licensees and may restrain a disposition of such books in violation of the conditions we have no combination or conspiracy. One man cannot combine or conspire. It takes two or more to make a combination or a conspiracy. So an agreement by all holders of copyrights to assign same to one person or corporation is but a sale of their own, and they may take pay in cash, horses, scrap iron or licenses to sell the copyrighted book provided they actually sell their copyrights. If the agreement be a mere pretence, however, a mere cover for a combination to violate some statute, then such agreement to sell their copyrights would be void and the whole combination would be illegal and void. So one person may purchase and own all the hay, oats or potatoes existing in the country. If he becomes such owner he may fix the price at which he will sell. Here there is no conspiracy or illegal combination. But if the several owners of such produce combine and agree that they will fix prices, interfere with and limit interstate commerce, drive all other dealers and owners of similar property who will not join them in their purposes out of business and deprive them, if possible, of their right to purchase and ship produce from State to State as a part of interstate commerce, we undoubtedly have an illegal combination and no member of such a conspiracy can enforce in a court of equity any contract or agreement made in execution, in whole or part, of such a conspiracy. It is evident that one may do, in fixing and enforcing prices, and in exacting tribute from the people and restraining interstate commerce, what two or more cannot do in pursuance of an agreement or combination. A corporation on becoming the owner of several patents or of several copyrights may do all acts under each that the person to whom such rights were originally granted might have done. Having become the owner it is entitled to the benefits and privileges of the monopolies granted. But all this affords no sanction or support whatever to the doctrine that the several owners of distinct patents, each having a monopoly of his particular patent, or the several owners of distinct copyrights, each having a monopoly of his particular copyright, may combine and conspire as to their patented articles or as to their copyrights or books published under and protected thereby to restrain interstate commerce in articles made or produced thereunder. A right or privilege to form such a combination or conspiracy is not embraced or included within the monopoly granted. The monopoly of one patentee cannot be extended and made more of a monopoly by that of another. The grant of an exclusive right to make and vend a certain machine does not include a license to combine and conspire with another having a like exclusive right to restrain trade and commerce between the States in those articles if made and put on the market or to conspire not to put them on the market. The right to elect not to make or sell is necessarily included. The right to combine and conspire is not. In any event the so-called Sherman Law forbids any and all combinations in restraint of such commerce.

In the case of copyrighted books it is evident that if the publisher of one or two should demand and exact of the purchaser at retail a grossly unreasonable price he would sell but few if any copies. Others would supply the market, for readers would forego that book of those books and find reading matter elsewhere. But when all publishers of and dealers in copyrighted books—and nearly all new books are now copyrighted—combine to exact a fixed arbitrary price, etc., the readers of books become powerless, if they would read at all, not because of the monopoly granted or sanctioned by the government in granting the copyright but because of the new monopoly, (the conspiracy of monopolists,) created by the agreement and combination of these monopolists, one that is forbidden and denounced by the Act of July 2, 1890 (26 St. L. 209), entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

Section one of that act reads, "Every contract, combination in the form of a trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce amongst the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal."

It is not necessary that the effect necessarily be to restrain trade or commerce. It is sufficient if the combination may have that effect. It seems to this Court impossible to hold that this section of the act does not apply to a combination of patentees to restrain trade and commerce in patented articles made under their patents as much as to such a combination made by dealers in other articles of commerce.

In 1 Page on Contracts, Sec. 445, p. 698, after a statement regarding the law as to "Monopoly Contracts concerning Patents" it is said "But if the owners of distinct patents combine to prevent competition in business, and to control the price of the patented article, such combinations and all contracts for such purposes are as invalid as if the articles were not patented." The following cases are cited to sustain the statement: National Harrow Co. v. Hench, 83 Fed. Rep. 36; 27 C. C. A. 349; 55 U. S. App. 53; 39 L. R. A. 299; National Harrow Co. v. Quick, 67 Fed. Rep. 130; Vulcan Powder Co. v. Powder Co., 96 Cal. 510; 31 Am. St. Red. 242; Gamewell, etc., Co. v. Crane, 160 Mass. 50; 22 L. R. A. 673.

In 1 State and Federal Control of Persons and Property (Tiedman), 412-413, it is said "But the mere fact that the subject matter of the monopolistic combination may be patent rights, covering machines employed in the same art or industry, will not protect the combination from the penal provisions of the anti-trust laws. If a corporation or association is formed among manufacturers and patentees of certain articles of kindred character in order to control the trade and prices of such articles, the combination is nevertheless illegal although the exclusive manufacture of the goods is guaranteed by letters patent from the United States government." At the time of that writing, 1900, the author was not aware of the decision in Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S., 70, which modifies some of the cases cited by him, but not in respect to the general doctrine stated.

In Bement v. Harrow Co., supra, the Court at page 94 plainly intimates that the several owners of several patents may not combine to restrain commerce in their patented articles. It is unnecessary to cite many cases. If Mantague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, and Northern Securities Company v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, are to be respected as law and followed in cases where there is no hue and cry against railroads, this combination is illegal as in restraint of interstate commerce.

If anything can be found in the prevailing opinion in John D. Park & Sons Co. v. The Wholesale Druggists' Association et. al., 175 N. Y., 1, supporting the contention of the complainants here, it is sufficient to say that this Court does not agree with the prevailing opinion or decision in that case, but does agree with the dissenting opinions of Martin J. and Cullen, C. J., with whom Vann J. concurred.

The defendants have not infringed and are not threatening to infringe complainants' copyright, nor have they violated any contract. The complainant is seeking to enforce against defendants an unlawful combination agreement to which such defendants are not parties and by which they have not consented to be bound in selling books of which they are the absolute owners. The same result on a similar state of facts as to the effect of such notice was reached by the Court in Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Snellenburg, 131 Fed. Rep. 530.

The defendants are entitled to a decree dismissing the complaint with costs.

NEW SHAKESPEARE FINDS.

As a result of the recent discovery, in a Buckinghamshire village of the old quarto of "The Tragedie of King Richard the Third," sold at Sotheby's on the 12th inst., "five more quartos," according to the London Academy, "have been forthcoming from George Carrington, of Great Missenden. Great Missenden is within a short distance of the cottage in Chalfont St. Giles to which Milton, 'Inferior to the vilest now become,' retired during the plague, just after 'Paradise Lost' had been completed. Milton had for neighbors Penn, whose meeting place at the Jordans, with its secluded little burial ground, still remains; and the Quaker Ellwood, in whom, though all was 'irrevocably dark . . . Without all hope of day,' he found a close friend, and who, on seeing 'Paradise Lost,' advised the poet to write a companion poem, 'Paradise Found.'

"The Tragedie of King Richard the Third," as noted in our account of the sale in our issue for July 15, bears the signature "Wm. Penn," probably that of the admiral, father of the founder of Pennsylvania, in five places, and it is noteworthy that one of the five quartos which are to be offered by Messrs. Sotheby on the 29th inst. bears the same autograph. This is the "Second Part of the History of King Henry the Fourth," 1605; the others are the "True Chronicle History of the Life and Death of King Lear," 1608, "The Tragedie of King Richard the Second," 1605, the "Historie of Henry the Fourth, with the Battle at Shrewsburie," 1608, and "The Most Excellent Historie of the Merchant of Venice, with the extreme Cruelty of Shylocke the Jew towards the said Merchant in cutting a just pound of his flesh; and the obtaining of Portia by the Choyce of three Chests," 1652.

OUTING OF EMPLOYEES OF AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY.

THE Mutual Benefit Association of the Employees of the American News Company is to hold its first annual picnic and games at Banzer's Cypress Hills Park, Evergreen, L. I., on Saturday, August 26. The tickets, admitting one person, are 25 cents, and as the committee in charge of the entertainment wishes the members and their friends, both men and women, to have a thoroughly good time, there will be numerous games, dancing and other forms of amusement. Charles F. Lehr is chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, and J. Gillis is chairman of the judges of the games.

COMMUNICATIONS.

CATALOGUING SECOND-HAND BOOKS.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: Seven years ago I put forward in your columns a plea for a uniform system in cataloguing second-hand books—a plea which you very cordially upheld—contributing some valuable practical suggestions in a leading article dealing with the subject.

But my feeble voice, even with your powerful backing, did not reach far, and so far as I can see there has been no concerted action taken in the direction indicated.

Recently, however, a more powerful voice has been lifted in favor of the idea. At the meeting of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland, held in Edinburgh last month, Lord Rosebery, in the course of his reply to the toast of "Literature," said, among many other interesting things, "With regard to second-hand literature, much is to be done by grouping and guidance, and I believe that in that direction the future of book catalogues must take shape. In that way you are not merely vendors, but educators, and that after all is the proper function of the bookseller." But more than this—not only would it be a boon to the bookbuyer—it would pay the bookseller. With the A. L. A. catalogue class list before him the task of classification is easy, and if the sellers of second-hand books would all agree to follow this or some other system time and money would be saved by everybody concerned.

Yours truly,

CHARLES WELSH,
WINTHROP, MASS., July 6, 1905.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

TO RESTRAIN PIRACY OF A GIBSON DRAWING.

PETER F. and ROBERT J. COLLIER, publishers of Collier's Weekly, have brought suit against Willis H. Peters, of Norwalk, Ohio, for reprinting, without authority, one of Charles Dana Gibson's drawings, entitled "The Game of Life—His Move." For the infringement of the copyright, the Colliers ask $5000 damages, while the privilege of the exclusive control and publication is valued at $25,000, in which sum they ask damages. A perpetual injunction is asked, a temporary one having been granted, restraining Peters from further publication and circulation of the picture.

OBITUARY NOTES.

HENRY NATHAN WHEELER, in charge of the educational department of Houghton, Mifflin & Co. since 1882, died in Cambridge, Mass., July 7. Mr. Wheeler was born in Concord, Mass., September 3, 1850, and was graduated from Harvard in 1871. Soon thereafter he became an instructor of mathematics in Harvard, which he left in 1882 to take charge of the educational and school book publications of Houghton, Mifflin & Company, at times assisting authors while preparing their books. He himself wrote and published "Elements of Plane Trigonometry," "Spherical Trigonometry," "Logarithms" and "Second Lessons in Arithmetic." He also edited the "Harvard University Catalogue," 1878-1882, and revised and edited Warren Colburn's "Intellectual Arithmetic." Mr. Wheeler took an interest in politics and was an active member of the Massachusetts Civil Service Reform Association.

MRS. BERTHA WILLIAMS, well known in the booktrade for the last ten years as a book buyer, died suddenly in Chicago on the 18th inst. Mrs. Williams was formerly connected with A. M. Rothschild & Co., of Chicago, and Lit Brothers, of Philadelphia, and more recently with Joseph Horne & Co., of Pittsburgh, on whose behalf she had gone to Chicago to look over the samples at the book fair. She was about forty years of age.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Twentieth Century Home, John Brisben Walker's monthly, has suspended publication until October, in order to build up a new editorial and business staff, the old staff having gone to W. R. Hearst with the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

AFTER thirty years of continuous publication the monthly magazine founded by Frank Leslie will no longer bear his name. With the September number it will become The American Illustrated Magazine. Some years ago the magazine passed out of control of the publisher's widow, who managed it for a while after Mr. Leslie's death. It was acquired by the Colver Publishing House, of which Frederick L. Colver is the head. The editor is Ellery Sedgwick, who has occupied Frank Leslie's editorial chair for the last four years. Mr. Colver has been connected with Leslie's for eighteen years. The reason given for the change of name is the radical difference between the magazine of to-day and the Leslie publications of long ago. The Colver Publishing House has built up a new property on the foundation that Leslie laid, and have won new friends. Leslie is now a mere memory to a few and they find his name little less than a handicap, and their present course is simply a logical step in the development of this magazine as a high-class monthly.

BUSINESS NOTES.

EMPORIA, KAN.—Eckdall & Haver, book-sellers, have dissolved partnership.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—David B. Clarkson has opened a bookstore at 9 South Illinois Street.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—William J. Burkhardt, manufacturing stationer, 206 Ocean Avenue, has just issued a catalogue of stationery novelties specially suitable for the holidays which will be sent to interested dealers free upon request.

NEW YORK CITY.—A hearing will be had at the U. S. District Court, in the Post-Office Building, on July 26 at 10 A.M., on the application of William Beverley Harison to be discharged from bankruptcy.

NEW YORK CITY.—The report that Brenzano's are erecting a building on the north-east corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street, and that they will remove their business there is, we are authorized to say, without any foundation whatever.

ZANESVILLE, O.—The Edmiston Book and Stationery Company has succeeded the Edmiston-Horney Company.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE PUBLISHERS' CONGRESS will meet in Milan, Italy, from June 6 to 10 next year.

THE C. A. NICHOLS COMPANY, Springfield, Mass., will publish shortly "Seventy Centuries," by J. N. Larned, editor of the "History of For Ready Reference and Topical Reading," and author of several popular histories.

JOHN LANE COMPANY, The Bodley Head, have just issued a new novel entitled "A Child of the Shore," a romance of Cornwall, by S. M. Fox, full of tradition and legend. Folk-lore and local superstitions still linger in the Cornwall region. It is not so long since Robert Stephen Hawker, the "vicar poet," assured visitors that he had occasionally seen mermaids in the sea along the beach.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish in the late summer a "Textbook in the History of Education," by Professor Paul Monroe, of the Teachers' College, New York City. The conception of the history of education adopted as a working basis is said to be radically different from that of similar works, and the volume will contain from three to four times the material found in any other English book on the subject.

McCLURE, PHILLIPS & Co. have in preparation a new book by Mrs. H. A. Mitchell Keays, best known as the author of the novel entitled "He That Eateth Bread with Me." The new book will be entitled "The Work of Our Hands," and will deal with a problem of wealth. They will publish this fall a book concerning children, entitled "Little Lords of Creation," also by Mrs. Keays, which has recently been brought out in England.

SWINBURNE's novel "Love's Cross-Currents," according to the London Athenaeum, was written many years ago, and was printed anonymously under the name of "A Year's Letters," in a weekly periodical called The Tatler, long since dead, edited by the well-known novelist, E. Francillon. The novel, although it has undergone no fundamental changes either in story or in characterization since its first appearance, has been revised by the author.

THE SAALFIELD PUBLISHING COMPANY, Akron, O., have in press a new book by Frances Trego Montgomery, author of the popular "Billy Whisker" series. Her new book is for older children and will be entitled "Frances and the Irrepressibles at Buena Vista Farm," giving an account of the many ways in which a party of boys and girls amused themselves one summer while boarding at a farm house. The book, which appeals to girls and boys alike, will be very fully illustrated.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY will publish early in the fall Anthony Hope's new novel, "A Servant of the Public," also, a volume of stories entitled "The Black Spaniel," by Robert Hichens, author of "The Garden of Allah." These two important books head a list of promising fiction, including new books by Robert Barr and Agnes and Egerton Castle. "The Garden of Allah," now in its seventh large printing, continues to gain in popular favor; and "Rose of the World," also among the "best selling" books, is now in its fourth printing.

THE CENTURY Co. have in preparation for fall publication a book on "Versailles and the Court under Louis XIV." by James Eugene Farmer, instructor in English literature at St. Paul's School, Concord, and the author of "Essays on French History," etc. Beginning with the inception of the plans for the palace and the laying out of the grounds, the author goes on to describe in detail the glories of the finished work and the daily life of the Grand Monarch and his court. The book will be very fully illustrated. They also announce the first Red Saunders novel, "Plain Mary Smith," by Henry Wallace Phillips.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT have in preparation "The Old Road," by Hillaire Belloc, the author of "Robespierre," etc., which presents a view of the great English thoroughfare through descriptions and pictures, the latter including eleven photogravure plates and seventeen line illustrations, besides a map in six sections; "Chats on Violins," by Olga Ragster, dealing with the history of the violin and the better known forms of this instrument, and the great makers, from Caspar di Salos and Amati to Stradivarius, with illustrations presenting a series of types of the violin from the ninth century down to to-day; also, a new novel by E. Maria Albanesi, (Effie A. Rowlands) entitled "Capricious Caroline," dealing with English society.

L. C. PAGE & Co. published on the 13th inst. "Cameron of Lochiel," a translation from the French by Professor Charles G. D. Roberts. The book relates the adventures of a young Scotch exile in Canada, during the period when the French and English were struggling for the possession of that country. The frontispiece is in color, from a drawing by H. C. Edwards, and the cover is an attractive design showing the Scotch thistle and the Cameron plaid. They will publish before the end of July the following two books for boys: "The Rival Campers," by Ruel P. Smith, which deals with the vacation experiences of two parties of campers on an island off the coast of Maine; and "The Young Section Hand," by Burton E. Stevenson, a story of railroading.

THE CENTURY COMPANY have in preparation "Indian Tales," a collection of stories originally printed in St. Nicholas, which, though intended for lads just coming to the age of interest in their country's history, should appeal to all young people. Further books in this promising series of historical tales will be: "Colonial Stories," "Revolutionary Stories," "Civil War Stories," and "Our National Holidays." Under the editorship of W. W. Willoughby, Professor of Political Science at Johns Hopkins University, the Century Company has issued five volumes of its series on The American State. Three more volumes are in active preparation. "The American Executive and Executive Methods," by President J. H. Finley, of the College of the City of New York; "American Legislatures and Legislative Methods," by Professor Paul R. Reinsch, of the University of Wisconsin; "Local Government in the United States," by Professor John A. Fairlie, of the University of Michigan.

THE suit brought by Edwin M. Post, a New York stock broker, against Charles H. Ahle, solicitor for a concern called the Society Editors' Association of 503 Fifth Avenue, New York, for an alleged attempt at blackmail, incidentally emphasizes, for the thousandth or more times, how easy it is to take advantage of the vanity of certain people. The defendant acted as canvasser for two special books, "America's Smart Set," and "Fads and Fancies," in which the doings of certain members of Society were glowingly described and illustrated, for which, it appears, a number of prominent people in New York and elsewhere actually paid from $500 to $1500 a copy for a book that has not yet been published. In order to bring pressure on the plaintiff, Ahle is said to have intimated that if Post did not subscribe certain stories damaging to his reputation might be printed in a certain so-called society paper. Post paid Ahle $500 in marked bills, and had him arrested. Ahle is held in default of $3500 bail. How many others were induced to subscribe under this pressure the District Attorney is now trying to discover.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

¶ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

¶ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

THE GREAT MOGUL

By LOUIS TRACY

Author of "The Wings of the Morning"

When a publisher has a new story ready to bring out which he knows is good; which follows acknowledged successes by the same author; and when the new book is a lot better than the two which preceded it, he feels like the small boy with a bunch of fire-crackers—he is anxious to hear the bang, and he wants to set off the whole pack at once.

THE GREAT MOGUL

is good enough to be advertised in various newspapers in one-quarter page space from time to time; and I think it is good enough to give every dealer a quick profit on a good many copies.

EDWARD J. CLODE, Publisher, New York City
